One segment of that service is communicating our technology, specifications, engineering advancements, updated product data, available literature, contact information, and industry solutions to our customers on an ongoing basis. Our investment in a new updated website conveys our commitment to provide current communications to our distributors, their customers, and the industry,” stated Scott Willson, CEO of Amweld International, LLC. “ There have been exciting changes at Amweld since January of this year, and many more to come. We plan to utilize our new website to communicate all our new developments as we move forward.”
